

AFRICA INTERNATIONAL MISSIONS

Postcards from Africa

Roger & Martha Dickson

Martha and I are flatland Kansas people. But for some reason we are fascinated with mountains. Africa is mostly flatlands. But South Africa is a nation that is blessed with some of the most beautiful mountains.

See what I mean? This is a typical view of the African landscape in the southern part of the continent. You can see the curve of the earth for endless miles. It's just flatness and endless roads that go forever.

How would you like to live in an oven at a 120 degrees? The Carlos James family lives in a typical house as this in northern Namibia. I just cannot see how they survive in such a place.

Cape Town at the foot of Table Mountain. This is called "city bowl," and was first settled in 1490. Cape Town was established as a food store where ships could replenish with food products on their way to India.

God blessed life with a tremendous will to survive. Even in the wilderness of northwest South Africa, there is life.

Some people would desire to build their castles in the wilderness of obscurity. There are no neighbors to disturb you.
